

National Prevention Week coming May 18 - 24

Sunday, 30 March 2014 08:44

National Prevention Week is held each year near the start of summer.

Summer is a season filled with celebrations and recreational activities where substance use and abuse can happen, such as graduation parties, proms, weddings, sporting events, and outdoor activities.

National Prevention Week is timed to allow schools to take part in a prevention-themed event before the school year ends, raising awareness in students of all ages. The percentages of marijuana, cigarette and alcohol initiates among youth increase between spring (April and May) and summer (June and July,) and the timing of National Prevention Week helps to educate young people and their families at this crucial time of year.

During National Prevention Week, community organizations across the country hosted health fairs, block parties, educational assemblies, town hall meetings, memorial walks, social media campaigns, and outdoor events.

Thousands of people attended these events and helped to raise awareness about the importance of substance abuse prevention and the promotion of mental health.

National Prevention Week supports the concept that effective prevention of mental and substance use disorders requires consistent action. It underscores the efforts outlined in SAMHSA's Strategic Initiative #1 (Prevention of Substance Abuse and Mental Illness) and Strategic Initiative #8 (Public Awareness and Support) by raising awareness about substance abuse and mental health, and garnering public support through local events and nationwide participation.

History - In the summer of 2011, the National Prevention Council announced the release of the National Prevention Strategy, a comprehensive plan to increase the number of Americans who are healthy at every stage of life. The National Prevention Strategy emphasizes that prevention should
