

NCADD Adds New Feature to NCADD Addiction Medicine Update

NCADD has added a new feature to the NCADD Addiction Medicine Update on our website.

Visitors to the NCADD website (link) may now submit comments about the Updates.

The "comments" feature will make the site more interactive and, if successful, may be added to other sections of the website.

Addiction Medicine Update provides the latest information from NCADD's Medical-Scientific committee.

The NCADD Medical-Scientific Committee is made up of physicians, psychologists and others to provide advice and guidance to the NCADD Board of Directors, staff and National Network of Affiliates on activities related to medicine, health and addiction to alcohol and drugs. The Committee develops NCADD position papers, advisories, and other public statements for approval by the Board which reflect the latest medical and scientific understanding of the disease of alcoholism and drug dependence.

Additionally the NCADD Medical-Scientific Committee:

- Identifies areas needing further research and encourages the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism (NIAAA), National Institute on Drug Addiction (NIDA) and other organizations like the Research Society on Alcoholism (RSA) to undertake such research.
- Develops general information pamphlets to inform the public about relevant issues regarding alcoholism and drug dependence.

To read NCADD's Addiction Medicine Update, click here